

Outside One to the War.
The body of the well dressed young man found in Strong's Woods, near South Beach, yesterday was identified by Gustav Lederer of No. 911 Third Avenue, Manhattan, as that of Edward Livingston, a barber of the same name. The dead man was a suicide, and had pushed a live wire and his head with a razor. Mr. Lederer said no young man had been brooding over war.

Mustardine Conquers Sore Throat and Chest Colds

Just Rub It On and away goes Lumbago, Neuralgia, Lambock or Soreness. Will not Blister.

Go to any live drugstore to-day, say "Mustardine" and you will get a box of Mustardine. It is a little yellow ointment, and it is not a mustard. It is a mixture of the best of the world's most famous medicines, and it is the only one of its kind. It is the only one that will cure a sore throat, a chest cold, a lumbago, a neuralgia, a lambock, or a soreness. It will not blister. GAS BLOWS UP AN APARTMENT; 4 HURT, 1 DYING

Strange Explosion in Newark Sends Front of Whole Floor Into Street.

GIRL FATALITY INJURED.

Spark Ignites Gas Seepage Accumulated Between Walls and Under Roof.

Four people were hurt, one fatally, in an early morning explosion of accumulated gas seepage which to-day blew out the fourth floor front of an apartment house at No. 54 Atlantic Street, Newark, N. J. Nearly all of the family of Philip J. Bowers, a wealthy real estate operator, were hurt by the explosion and collapse of part of the roof over their heads, and Miss Mary Bowers, his daughter, sixteen years old, is dying in St. Michael's Hospital from burns and shock.

In some unaccountable manner gas accumulated in the space between the inner and outer walls of the apartment and filtered through to fill the space between the top of the living room and the roof above. At 6.30 o'clock, before any of the family was stirring, a spark ignited the gas and the explosion followed.

The entire front of the living room and the front of an adjacent bedroom were blown out into the street, chairs and pieces of bric-a-brac following in a shower of wreckage. A portion of the roof was lifted and hurled back. The living room and three bedrooms adjacent were filled with flame.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowers as well as seven other families in the building and the whole neighborhood were roused by the roar. Mr. Bowers ran into the living room. Daylight showed through a gap in the front wall and up-filled roof and what furniture still remained was smoldering from the gas flare. He ran to the bedrooms of his children and his aged mother, Mrs. Philip Bowers, to find them suffering serious injuries. His wife, however, was not hurt.

Besides the daughter Mary, who was unconscious and suffering from burns, the aged Mrs. Bowers, Thomas J. Bowers, a nineteen-year-old son, and Sophie Norwalk, a maid, were all suffering from shock and slight burns. A nearby physician attended them until an ambulance took them to St. Michael's Hospital. There the doctors said Mary Bowers would die; the others were not in danger.

C. Albert Ganser of the Combustible and Fire Risk Department in Newark, after trying in vain to trace the source of the gas leak, said the explosion was the strangest he had ever investigated.
